Washington, May 20.—With the bonus bill written into law over President Coolidge's veto, party leaders in congress today sought to speed up final action on the new tax reduction bill.

The tax measure, now in conference for adjustment of rates which differed in the house and senate bills, will provide a flat 25 per cent reduction on all income taxes for the present year, and a general slashing of federal taxes for future years.

The crushing defeats administered by the president by both house and senate when he sought to prevent passage of the bonus bill by a veto, were reported to have greatly weakened administration opposition to the revenue measure. Presidential spokesmen, who openly condemned the tax bill a week ago because it failed to include the Mellon plan, were now said to favor acceptance of the measure in belief another governmental clash between the White House and congress would result in grave damage to the president's political fortunes.

This belief was heightened by reliable reports that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon had practically withdrawn his opposition to the congressional tax bill, which ultimately will be a compromise between the Longworth Republican house bill and the Simmons Democratic senate measure. Mellon was said to have told friends he would not urge a veto of the tax bill.

The bonus payments will be distributed over a period of twenty years with the bulk of payments due at the end of the twentieth year, about the time most of America's war debts will be refunded. For this reason, Mellon was reported to feel the bonus and tax bills would not clash nor wreak a severe financial hardship upon the government.

Approximate surplus of $400,000,000 now in the Federal treasury, it was said, would be ample to meet the $152,000,000 payments due upon the bonus next year as well as the 25 per cent reduction in taxes for the current year. Thereafter the annual bonus payments will be comparatively trivial until the twentieth year when nearly $2,000,000,000 must be expended.

At that time, it was pointed out, foreign debt refundments will be due the United States which total four times the bonus outlay.

Congressional leaders today indicated the tax bill would be reported out of conference this week for final action in the senate and house. Under the rules the bill will be considered first by the house and if the compromise rates are accepted there, it will then go to the senate for the final vote before being sent to the White House.

Howard May Lose His Job

Robert J. Howard, Local Attorney, Head of Motor Vehicle Bureau, Expected to Resign Upon Request—Commissioner, With Broad Powers, to Be Handed to Another Democrat.

In spite of the fact that the legislature passed the bill which amends the Motor Vehicle law without any degree of controversy, the filling of the position of a commissioner by the president of the state tax commission, to have charge of the bureau of motor vehicles, bids fair to create more of a furor than was anticipated.

When Governor Smith was re-elected governor for a second term, following the administration of Nathan L. Miller, he went into the state tax commission with a fine tooth comb and requested the resignation of Former State Senator Walter Law, Jr., at that time president of the commission. Mr. Law refused to resign, whereupon Governor Smith preferred charges against him, alleging that his administration of the department was not to his satisfaction. Upon this and similar charges, Mr. Law stood trial at the hands of the governor who subsequently removed him and appointed John P. Gilchrist of New York city, as head of the state tax department.

Shortly after the removal of Mr. Law, Bert Lord, who was in charge of the motor vehicle bureau of the department, was likewise removed. He was succeeded by Robert Howard of Kingston, a young attorney who has held the position of head of the motor vehicle bureau of the state tax commission up to the present time.

During the recent session of the legislature the Motor Vehicle law was materially amended. One of the principal amendments was that which provided for a state-wide licensing of all operators of motor vehicles. The amendments were adopted and the governor signed them.

When the bill became a law one of its provisions was for the creation of the office of commissioner of motor vehicles with broad powers. Robert Howard has been acting as head of the motor vehicle bureau and it was supposed that he would be retained in his old position with the title of commissioner. This, it appears, is not the plan of the Democratic organization. The position is an exempt one and the salary, $5,000 a year.

Both President Gilchrist and Mr. Howard were out of town today so confirmation of the rumor that Mr. Howard had been asked to resign and had refused to do so could not be obtained.

Mr. Howard has had considerably over a year's experience as head of the motor vehicle bureau. He is an enthusiastic motorist. The president of the state tax commission has authority to fill all positions in his department, which it seems, carries also the power to dismiss.

Since his residence in Albany Mr. Howard has made many friends. He is a prominent Elk in Kingston, from which city he received his appointment as head of the motor vehicle bureau.

It is said that the patronage which goes with the office of commissioner of the automobile bureau of the state tax commission is ardently desired by New York county Democrats and that they are out to land the place.

Hotel Campaign Starts With $167,600 Subscribed

Executive Committee Sets The Pace With $49,000 Taken by its Members and Group Workers Follow—Who Will Get the "It-Can't-Be-Done" Club Goat?

Subscriptions to the amount of $167,600 for preferred stock in Kingston's new hotel were announced at the opening meeting of campaign workers held in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium on Monday evening.

The amount that must be sold is $300,000, but if $500,000 can be sold there will be no first mortgage and holders of preferred stock will have the first lien on the property.

Of the $127,800 sold by the executive committee more than $49,000 was taken by the members of that committee, proof that those at the head of the campaign are willing to invest their own money as well as ask others to invest.

Of the $40,000 sold by team workers, a large proportion was sold to themselves. Here is the score:

"This is not a dead town," said Arthur J. Burns, chairman of the sales organization. "If it ever was dead it has come to life, and the matter of selling hotel stock is up to the salesmen. There are people ready and willing to buy. They only wait to be asked. One man to whom I went said he didn't want to hear any argument or any details for Kingston needed a hotel and he knew what kind of hotels the American Hotels Corporation operated. All he wanted was a blank on which to sign for $2,000 of stock. Another man said he didn't want to be told anything as he had once bought stock in a hotel under similar circumstances and he wanted some in the new Kingston hotel."

Mr. Johnson said the biggest asset of any city was the way its citizens regarded it and spoke of it. He explained the method of awarding trophies to the most efficient group and divisions and insisted that there be no goose eggs on the score board any day.

The big trophy is a goat—the goat of the "It-Can't-Be-Done Club"—and the division turning in the largest amount gets the "It-Can't-Be-Done Club" goat. This goat is not alive but it can say "bla-a-u-h" in as plaintive a tone as the most enthusiastic member of the "It-Can't-Be-Done" Club.

New School and Parish House To Be Erected

Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church Awards Contract to Charles Hoffman and Son—Breaking Ground Service on Sunday Afternoon, May 25.

For some time the Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church on Livingston street has had under advisement plans for the erection of a much needed school and parish house. Recently they had accepted plans submitted by Architect George E. Lowe. These plans were circulated and bids were received from general contractors.

Charles Hoffman & Son of 107 South Manor avenue, Kingston, were the low bidders and on Sunday, May 18, 1924, the congregation resolved to accept this bid and instructed its board of trustees to let the contract at once.

At a meeting of the board of trustees on Monday evening, with Mr. Lowe and Charles Hoffman present the contracts were executed. The work will begin at once. This is one of the largest contracts awarded in this city this spring.

A special ground breaking service will be held on Sunday afternoon, May 25th, at 2:30 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to the general public to attend the ground breaking exercises.

The pastor, the Rev. F. T. Schroeder and his congregation are to be congratulated on their progressive and enterprising spirit. The Immanuel Lutheran congregation with the completion of this building will have one of the finest and most practical church properties in the city.

Play at St. Marlon.

The play "My Irish Rose" will be presented Wednesday evening in St. Marlon Church hall by the T. X. T. Club of Flatbush.

while the family was barricaded on the attic steps, he bore up better than a much younger man might have under the circumstances.

There is, however, some slight difference in the stories told as to just what happened and as to the number of men who were in the party. The attack did not commence until about 9:30 o'clock and at that time it was quite dark. The attack was continued until nearly midnight when the house was abandoned and left by the attacking party.

The Weston home is located on one of the many roads which run through the mountain country near Flatbush. On this particular road there is little travel and especially that part of the road where the Weston farm is located. The Weston home is the last house on the road coming north from New Paltz and it is considerable distance before this cross road joins into another road, which is the main road to Rifton.

Nearer New Paltz there are numerous houses and most of the residents travel to Rifton and for this reason few people pass the Weston home during the day. A quarter of a mile down the road toward New Paltz is located the nearest residence to the Weston home. In this particular part of the country there is a large amount of timber and wood land and the highway on both sides of the Weston home runs for a considerable distance through swampy, wooded sections.

According to New York newspapers the revival of Weston's fame, caused by the attack, may make it profitable for him to attempt another pedestrian tour.

Thirty subscriptions amounting to $17,100 were reported at the noon luncheon today at the Y. M. C. A. in the drive to sell stock for the erection of Kingston's modern hotel, making a total of 175 subscriptions amounting to $184,700 of the $300,000 needed to make the stock selling campaign a success. There were sixty-eight present at the luncheon, and a larger attendance at the luncheon Wednesday noon was urged.

The billygoat was awarded to James Sneed whose team reported the largest amount of stock sold today. Mr. Sneed's team is in Division A, which was awarded the flag for the division reporting the largest amount.

Arthur Connelly's team was awarded the banner in Division B; Ernest Hicks in Division C, and Chester Miller in Division D.

During the serving of the luncheon Paul A. Zucca led in singing the campaign songs assisted by Harry Maisonholder at the piano and the singing added "pop" to the meeting.

The luncheon was served in the big gymnasium by members of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and when the men had taken their seats at the tables the Rev. Dr. Charles C. Ellis of the Rondon Presbyterian Church led in prayer. After the close of the dinner the reports were read and chalked up on the large blackboard in the rear of the gym where all could readily see the figures.

Brief talks were made by Frank R. Bowley, treasurer of the campaign, and by Campaign Manager Johnston, who urged that there be a larger attendance of workers at the noon day luncheons. The reports were encouraging and Mr. Johnston said that he believed that at Wednesday's meeting a total of over $200,000 would be reported by the workers for the first three days of the drive.

One of the subscriptions reported at today's meeting was received from a New York man. While some of the subscriptions reported were for $200, the smallest amount of stock that may be sold, some subscriptions of $1,000 were reported.

One of the large rooms facing Broadway in the association building is being used for the campaign, and the list of prospects are kept for the use of workers. This office will be kept open evenings until at least 9 o'clock for the benefit of the workers. It will also be kept open for the benefit of those desiring information regarding the stock selling campaign.

Color Contrasts Are Noted in New Gloves

This year, more than ever before, is the demand for originality manifesting itself in gloves, both in those made here and in France. With the single exception of evening gloves, the keynote is to be found in color contrasts. Even the gloves that one wears with a tailored costume reflect the tendency toward brilliancy and vivacity.

The gloves themselves may range throughout the entire chromatic scale from white to black; it is in the embroidery, and most particularly in embroidered cuffs, that the contrasts are found. Cuffs that turn back, revealing brilliant linings of silk or leather, are offered by leading shops in vast array, and the designers have left no turn of the kaleidoscope unexplored.

Combinations of black and white are many. An interesting and attractive example of the association of these two colors is found in black kid gloves with reversed cuffs lined with perforated white kid, through which the black ground accents the pattern of the perforations. The same effect is acquired in many instances with white kid gloves lined with black, green, brown, red, or in fact almost any other color.

The lighter shades of tan, such as fawn, beige, sand, mode and mastic, are worn extensively this spring, embroidered either in direct contrast or in a darker brown shade.

Evening gloves are the one exception to the rule of contrast. The woman who really gives due consideration to appearance and taste wears nothing but pure white gloves for evening. Not even in the stitching is any contrast permissible; embroidery must be as white as the leather itself. Only in the choice of leathers is any latitude allowable this spring. Evening gloves may be of shiny kid or velvety suede.

As for length, the short two or three-button styles are equally appropriate with long or short sleeves. Twelve or sixteen-button lengths are permissible with short-sleeved or sleeveless frocks for informal occasions; it is a matter for individual decision, but for evening fashion decrees elbow-length gloves.

Plaids and Stripes in Paris' Favor for Wraps

Apart from the subject of wraps, in this season of new fashions, fabrics of compelling significance in pattern and color. Paris is sponsoring many attractive materials in checks and stripes, showing distinct moderation in plaids and the bolder designs.

The daring things in both plaids and stripes and the wild dashes in color are the expression of fashion's mood in America. Lines have widened until but four or five blocks are required to measure the length of a woman's coat, and squares of figured print covering 27 inches alternate with the plain in cloths by the yard. Stripes ten inches wide are not startling, the shops are so full of this character of goods and of the coats and frocks of which they are fashioned.

In sports clothes and for all the out-of-doors service the brazen patterns and vivid colors seem quite the proper thing, but manufacturers and modistes appear not to be discriminating between this type of dress and the more conventional. The lighter woollens and tub silks are gay and pretty and will grow in popularity as the season develops.

Stitched-On Patterns Feature of New Shoes

Styles in shoes are many and new. In the sueded for town wear, for street or interior, daytime or evening, there are the usual colors, though in various shades, and black and white, with the staple all-black.

The novelty in outing shoes is the manner of trimming, of combining white and colors. These are most chic in white suede, with tips and straps in glaze kid, yellow, scarlet, jade, blue and black. Even the white canvas shoes for tennis and golf and the beach are ornamented this season with stitched-on patterns of colored leather. Bright red on white is very popular.

Slight Women in Fashion Picture

Gracefully Slender People Aided by Having All in Their Favor.

Fluffy fashions, fatal to the fat woman, are the joy of the thin girl, muses a fashion writer in the Kansas City Star. A depressingly thin girl often can achieve an effect of lovely slenderness, as she floats about in shirring, puffings, flying ends and panels. Clouds of tulle and malines conceal her too sharp angles and emphasize whatever fragile beauty she may possess. Generally, they become both her face and her figure.

For her daytime costumes she must depend less on fabric than on line to fill out her too angular figure.

Girdles and yokes are appropriate, and will cut her too tall slimmness somewhat. Her necklines should always incline to the U-shaped rather than the V-shaped; in fact, she should always avoid pointed effects. Wide girdles and draped-around waists are becoming, as are all devices that seem to shorten, rather than lengthen, the waist.

But it is in sports clothes, as in evening wear, that the slim woman should shine. Plaids were made for her! So were full, short, plaited skirts, stubby, broad-toed, low-heeled shoes and round, childish collars. A short sports coat, or, for that matter, a short jacket of any sort, transforms the thin woman's angularity to a graceful slenderness. If the coat has a belt, and a short attached cape, or a round collar, so much the better.

The gospel for the thin, tall woman by which to chart her shopping tours is that long lines from shoulder to foot give height, which she must discerningly avoid; and that horizontal lines crossing the figure seem to decrease height, and must be used as much as possible.

There are two commonly seen features in nearly every season's clothes which the thin woman may not wear:

Mannish Suit of Blue Is Always Becoming and Appropriate.

striped materials, and the military collar. Stripes, of course, add to the apparent height of her figure; and the plain military collar reveals, in all its ungracious straightness, the thin woman's throat.

In general, flamboyant laces, fluffy ribbon bows, broad horizontal bands, braiding put on in wavy lines, ruffles, scallops; in fact, all those frivolous floating, feminine touches which the fat woman loves and can't wear—the slim woman can claim as her own.

Tooled Leather Much in Fashion This Year

Twenty-five years ago a variety of articles in tooled leather was done by a charming and cultivated American girl and were exhibited in art museums as a new idea in the decoration of small accessories for women.

Lately, in the feverish search for novelty, tooled leather has been coming into favor. Not all of it, to be sure, can be classified as art in the highest degree, but very attractive things are done by art students and aircraft people, and are finding enthusiastic responses among fashionable women.

After a satiety of beaded bags, embroidered bags, bags of old brocades and of petit point, the newest, in illuminated and tooled leather, are going like hot cakes. Not all are strictly hand-tooled: such are still very expensive; but many of the bags, card cases and belts which are at least done partially by hand are effective and are just now very smart.

Embroidered Frocks

Sheer white voile frocks completely covered with delicate machine embroidery in colors are delightfully new and charming. One dress has a long tunic reaching almost to the bottom of the skirt.

To Muster Combat Train.

Captain H. J. Keator of the combat train of the 156th Field Artillery desires all members of the train to be present this evening at the armory, when they will be mustered in. Officers from Newburgh will be present.

SURELY HAS THE NERVE.

Exercising his veto power on several occasions, President Coolidge has surely proved that he has the nerve to do what he thinks is right whether it is to bring forth applause or just the opposite. With the president it is apparently a question of what is right and what is wrong, rather than what is wise politically or unwise as to vote production. As to what will produce the most votes, that is a matter which seemingly does not enter the president's mind when there is a problem before him to be decided on its merits and not on its vote-catching possibilities.

The recent veto of the bonus bill was the best evidence of the courage of President Coolidge. Undoubtedly he would have received louder applause by approving of the bill, but in his opinion the measure was one that should be killed and he did not hesitate to show where he stood. It is not a question, so far as the ordinary person is concerned, as to what is and what is not the correct solution of the bonus contention, but that there is a man in the White House who has the courage to live up to his convictions is what makes people feel safe just at this period.

Since the war there has been a desire to do everything for the soldiers, able and disabled. There is no doubt as to this and the last man who would block any effort in this direction would be the president. The president, however, was thinking of all the people when he vetoed the bill, and to live up to his oath of office he must think of all the people. At any rate he felt that in the interest of all the people the bonus bill should be vetoed and he had the courage to act as he thought was right, and it is fortunate, very fortunate, that there is courage in the White House now.

THE "SECRET" OF STYLE.

Prof. Clement E. Foust, of the English department of Philadelphia's Central High School, is quoted as saying that when he caused one of his sections to read "From Washington to Wilson," a series of addresses on Americanism, the reaction on the speeches of Wilson was so eager and alert, "because of the neat and melodious phrasing," that he wrote to the ex-President, telling him about it and asking whether he had any secrets of style. Mr. Wilson wrote in reply, dated January 9, 1923, from his residence in Washington, as follows: "It was very kind of you to give me the pleasure of knowing of the cordial response of your class to some of the things I have said. I do not remember that I have anywhere said anything about an art of composition. I am not fortunate enough to possess any secret of style, and feel that I owe such power of expression as I may possess altogether to the training of my father, who was himself a master of English expression."

No doubt he owed much to his father's training, but probably he owed much more to his own eye for form and ear for rhythm as he read the best writers of English prose. His disclaimer of the possession of "any secret of style" calls to mind the recent declaration of Joseph Conrad, a master in literary expression, that in writing he "never thinks" of style but only of "getting forward with the story" in the way that seems best. One is also reminded of the long-famed pronouncement of Buffon, the French Academician, that "the style is the man."

No sooner is it proposed by the House Committee on Insular Affairs to make recognition of the independence of the Philippines absolute after twenty years than it is announced from the Department of Agriculture that vast tracts of land suitable for rubber plantations have been discovered in the islands.

Victor Berger, Socialist Congressman from Milwaukee, is still loyal to and doing all he can for Germany. He asks our government to revise the Versailles treaty, conveniently ignoring the fact that, having declined to ratify that treaty, we are not a party to and have nothing to do with it.

Simon L. Nye thinks, as Solomon seemed to think in his day, that there are too many books. He told the Association that there should be fewer and better ones. The difficulty is that genius is scarce in any line, and most publishers, with heavy costs and losses to make up, are looking, not for literature, but for "best sellers."

WATER AND BLOOD PRESSURE.

It would seem that we are hearing more about blood pressure these days than about tuberculosis.

It may be due to the fact that the latter can now be cured if discovered in time. But on every hand you hear of this or that one, who has to live so carefully because he has high blood pressure.

It would be unwise for me to belittle the importance and danger of high blood pressure. The dangers are but too real. But you may have a blood pressure somewhat higher than that permitted by the insurance companies, and yet be in no danger therefrom.

As I said in a former article, the high pressure may be due to some temporary disturbance, such as a slight infection from the teeth, nose, tonsils or intestine, or perhaps from some emotional disturbance or excitement.

Another cause that is not always remembered is that there may be a little more fluid—blood—in the vessels and thus a little more tension or pressure on that account.

For instance, a patient being examined by his physician registered nearly twenty points higher than normal for his age, and at least ten points higher than that permitted by the insurance companies.

He appeared to be perfectly healthy and felt well in every way. The physician asked him to come in at a different hour the next day. The pressure registered exactly the same.

He returned at a different hour two days later, and the pressure was the same. The physician by questioning learned that he was a great water drinker. In addition to water and tea at meals, he consumed about three quarts of water during the twenty-four hours.

He was instructed to cut down his liquid intake by one-half, for a period of ten days. At the end of this time his pressure was down to normal.

He said he felt just as well, but he did miss the water, which was a long established habit.

He was instructed to go back to it again, and in two weeks' time his pressure was up again to its original point.

Was he advised to cut it down again?

Not by any means.

Water is a splendid thing even where the pressure is high, because in the long run it removes material that would become deposited on the walls of the blood vessels, harden them, and cause real high blood pressure.

HERE'S THE LATEST—COD LIVER OIL IN TASTELESS TABLETS

Greatest Flesh Builder For Skinny, Weak, Run-Down People—Full of Vitamins.

No more will weak, thin, unfortunate children cry in protest when the nasty, fishy-tasting, horrible-smelling cod liver oil is brought out.

Medical science progresses rapidly, and now you can get at your druggist's real, genuine cod liver oil in sugar-coated tablets that young and old can take with ease and pleasure.

Even the run-down and skinny grown-ups, who ought to take cod liver oil, because it really is the greatest vitamin food and builder of healthy flesh in the world, will feel extremely joyful when they read this welcome news.

Of course, doctors have been prescribing cod liver oil in tablets under another name for several years, but it is only of late that one can walk into a drug store and get a box of these flesh-producing tablets just as easy as a bottle of magnesia.

Thin, run-down, anaemic men, women, and children, who need to grow strong and take on flesh are advised to get a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, and if you don't gain 5 pounds in 30 days just get your money back.

One woman gained fifteen pounds in five weeks, according to her own doctor—another ten pounds in three weeks. A very sickly child, aged nine, twelve pounds in seven months, and now plays with other children and has a good appetite.

Just ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets. Any good druggist will tell you that they are wonderful flesh and health builders. Only sixty cents for 60 tablets.

Highway Bureau Approves of Supervisors Plan

Albany, N. Y., May 13, 1924. The state bureau of highways has approved the plan of the board of supervisors of Ulster county to issue bonds for the improvement of the county roads.

At 8:50 o'clock when the board of supervisors met Monday evening, and about 10 o'clock when the board was taken up on matters relating to highways and approving the plan of the board of supervisors to issue bonds for the improvement of the county roads, the board of supervisors of Ulster county, N. Y., met Monday evening, and about 10 o'clock when the board was taken up on matters relating to highways and approving the plan of the board of supervisors to issue bonds for the improvement of the county roads.

The communication from Commissioner A. W. Brandt was as follows:

Bureau of Highways, Albany, N. Y., May 13, 1924.

Mr. R. DeWitt, Clerk, Board of Supervisors, Ulster County, Kingston, New York.

Sir: Under date of May 12, I sent you the following telegram:

"Ulster county determination not acted upon pending other advice as to reason for elimination of some towns. Letter follows."

In 1923, the towns of Lloyd, New York and Shawangunk received no portion of state funds under chapter 320-B of the highway law.

At the meeting of the board of supervisors held April 29, 1924, the towns of Saugerties, Olive and Shawangunk received no apportionment of state funds.

All other towns in the county except the town of Ulster, which is a small, poor town with a small mileage of public highways, each year received a portion of such money.

I understand that the three towns in 1923 and the three towns in 1924 which such money were withheld have all elected Democratic supervisors and that the reason they were not included in the apportionment was that they were represented by Democratic supervisors.

I desire to bring up a matter in which the political complexion of the town is concerned. It has no place in the distribution or use of public funds for public highway construction. But the discrimination against these towns and the reason therefore is so obvious that I cannot see my way clear to ignore the determination and agreement as passed by your board.

The legislature in enacting section 320-B of the highway law did not have in mind and had no intention of allowing this money to be used in a discriminatory manner by the boards of supervisors. It was given to the towns with the understanding that it would be equitably apportioned among the towns. I can find nothing in the law which states that the people of any town shall be penalized simply because they have exercised their right of suffrage in a manner displeasing to the majority of the board of supervisors. Such an action on the part of the supervisors would be exactly parallel to an action by the commissioner of highways in withholding maintenance money from a county because the political complexion of the county did not agree with that of the commissioner.

I am returning herewith without approval copies of the determination and agreement submitted by you to Commissioner Howe and which I forwarded to me for necessary action.

Yours very truly, A. W. BRANDT, Commissioner.

Under the head of motions and resolutions Supervisor Schantz offered the following:

Resolved: That the county attorney be and he hereby is authorized and directed to forthwith institute and commence in the name of the board of the county, or in the name of and on behalf of the board of supervisors of the county, such action or actions, proceeding or proceedings, as he may be advised to be necessary, to compel and force the state department of public works, or other state department or officer charged by law with such power or authority, to approve the determination and agreement for county aid highways or county roads, pursuant to section 320-B, or any other section of the highway law, to be constructed in the county of Ulster in the year 1924.

Resolved: That the distribution of money for such purpose made by this board on the 28th day of April, 1924, which was submitted to the State Bureau of Highways, or the state commissioner of highways, for approval on or about the 1st day of May, 1924, and was returned to this board on or about the 1st day of May, 1924, without approval and moved its adoption.

The resolution was adopted by a vote of 22 yeas, to eight nays. Those voting in the negative were Supervisors Brown, Lester, B. Davis, Enderly, McDermott, McTague, Ryan, Shaw, and Supervisor L. B. Davis asked if there was any excuse why the town of Olive was cut out. It is every town's money—not John Eckert's money. It is something more than spite. The town was building now the most important link in Ulster county it connecting the Catskill mountains with the Rondout valley and Ashokan reservoir. The town has got the machinery to build the road, but had not been included in the apportionment. Olive pays more than several other towns in the county funds who get large amounts. Denning pays $2,000 and gets $6,000 and has only a wheelbarrow working. Our town asked for only $10,000 and is entitled to $30,000 in proportion to the money paid to the county. The town pays one-seventh of the taxes of the county. One man has the whole say and if the board thought it was fair he had to be satisfied, but the people of his town would not be and are aware where to place the blame.

Clerk Henry R. DeWitt read a lengthy communication from R. Trowbridge of Kyserke, calling attention to a petition signed by 58 taxpayers read at a previous meeting asking for an appropriation of $6,000 to be used on construction and improvement of Road 26. He earnestly requested that the petition be complied with and the $6,000 appropriated so that work on Road 26 could be started at once. Received and filed.

Charles F. McKenzie in a communication called attention to the condition of the Bearsville-Wilow road in course of construction, it being torn up the entire length. It was requested that the contractor be compelled to finish the work at once. Should no action be taken, the writer stated, it would be necessary to take it up with state highway department.

The third reading and passage of the acts introduced at the previous meeting allowing various towns to issue bonds of certificates of indebtedness the proceeds from sale thereof to be used for highway improvements, was taken up.

Supervisor McDermott asked that as the state commissioner of highways had revoked the appropriations why it was necessary to pass laws to raise the money. He thought that the matter of appropriations should be held up until a working agreement be reached with the state department. No action was taken on the suggestion.

All the acts to issue bonds or certificates of indebtedness were then passed, there being four votes against the Denning act, being Supervisors Enderly, McDermott, McTague and Ryan. There were three votes against the passage of the Esopus act, Supervisors Enderly, McDermott and Ryan, and Supervisor Ryan voted "no" on the Gardiner and Hardenbergh acts. All the other acts were passed each by a vote of 30 yeas, and noes none. The act to authorize the town of Ulster to issue bonds in $16,000 to pay the town's share for construction of the bridge across the Esopus creek from the Higginsville side in the city to the town of Ulster was passed on motion of Supervisor Brink.

Supervisor Auchmoedy called up the resolution that $10,000 be appropriated on the county outside the city for improvements to the county home at New Paltz and it was adopted.

A bill from John Hiltibrant for $75 for expert testimony in the matter of condemnation of lands for the Rondout-Port Even bridge was read and audited.

On motion of Supervisor Schantz the board of supervisors adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

The DAIRY

GRAIN MIXTURES FOR YOUNG DAIRY CALVES

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Dairy calves in their second week will begin nibbling at grain, if any is available, and by the time they are one month old will often eat a half-pound a day. Young calves relish wheat bran, which is often used in grain mixtures at the start. Corn has a desirable effect upon cattle of all ages and is available on most farms.

It helps to make up for the fat removed from skim milk. Experiments have shown that cracked corn is better than ground corn for young calves. The United States Department of Agriculture recommends that bran and cracked corn be made the basis of the feed mixture whenever possible. Ground oats is a very good feed, but oats are not so generally grown as corn and usually cost more per unit of feed than corn and bran. The department recommends any of the following mixtures as suitable for young calves:

1. Three parts cracked corn and one part wheat bran.
2. Three parts cracked corn, one part wheat bran and one part ground oats.
3. Three parts cracked corn, one part wheat bran, one part ground oats and one part linseed meal.
4. Five parts cracked corn, one part wheat bran, one part ground oats and one part blood meal.
5. Oats, ground.

Some time during the third month calves will probably be eating about three pounds of grain a day. When the grain is fed with the separated milk it should never be mixed with the milk, and it is questionable whether there is any advantage in soaking or boiling.

Improved-Sires Work Is Encouraged by Breeders

"The Alabama beef cattle breeders have sold all of their surplus bulls of breeding age," says K. G. Baker, extension market agent of that state, who recently visited the United States Department of Agriculture. Mr. Baker cites as one reason for this increased demand for bulls the influence of the co-operative show and sale of feeder cattle held in October at the Montgomery Union Stock Yards, in co-operation with the state extension service.

In this event nearly 1,200 head of cattle were sold at auction, many of them going to feedlot buyers representing adjoining and more northern states. Before the sale the cattle were all publicly graded for quality, size, sex, etc., and demonstrations made to show the advantages of using pure bred bulls of good quality.

Producers received from 2 to 3 cents per pound more for their cattle under this system than they could obtain by marketing them in ungraded lots to local buyers.

Plans have been made to continue this enterprise as a permanent annual event, and it is expected to provide a much-needed stimulus to beef cattle production in that section.

Forage Crops in Summer Are of Big Importance

A good many dairymen find that when the summer months begin to show up dry pastures, they also find it the easiest way to let the cows dry up, or at least cut down the milk production. It is during these months that it is important to keep a steady supply of milk to meet a steady demand from the markets. During May and early June, the cows are doing their best, while in July the milk supply falls off.

Since, legumes or hay feeds should be added to the scanty pastures in July and August. For that reason it is well to be planning on the crops now, to keep an even feed supply on hand all summer. Some grain should be added to the supplementary feed throughout the summer. Alfalfa, clover, soy beans, cowpeas, sudan grass, sorghums, silage, field peas, etc., can be turned into ready cash by way of the milk route to very good advantage in this manner.

Dairy Notes

It takes longer to feed a scrub cow than it does to milk her.

Ordinary shelled corn is the best supplement to skim-milk for calves.

One of the neglected opportunities in most dairies is the curdcomb. It pays to use it.

Pure bred dairy cows do not guarantee success, nor even pure bred cows from high-producing ancestry.

Tuberculosis can be detected with a high degree of accuracy by the use of the tuberculin test.

There is no higher type of farming than that of keeping good dairy cows, selling the butterfat, and feeding the skim milk to good hogs, calves and chickens.

Excepting the extra time for milking, it requires no more labor to care for a cow producing 8,000 pounds of milk than it does to care for a scrub producing 4,000 pounds.

Age of the Sun

The age of the sun has been fixed at something between two billion and three billion years by Prof. Walter Nernst, after researches announced at a meeting in Berlin of the Society for Industrial Progress. The estimates are based in part on the rate of decomposition of radio-active elements, and in part on deductions from Einstein's theory of relativity concerning the relation between mass and energy.

Early estimates set the age of the sun as low as ten million years, but geologists showed this was too short to allow for the erosion and other changes observed in the crust of the earth since it became solid. The radioactive decomposition of uranium to lead is a more accurate cosmic clock, and this indicates that the solid crust of the earth has existed for at least one and one-half billion years. According to Nernst, the sun, while getting past middle age, is still good for 400,000,000 years, after which a crust will form on its surface and life such as we know it will cease upon the earth.

Wants 'Em 'Eliminated

"Of course, if you don't care for those towers," explained the architect, "we can easily have them eliminated."

Mr. Bullion-Bazge furrowed his brows and puffed out his cheeks. Then he looked up from the plans.

"H'm," he grunted. "They look real handsome as they are, but if you think 'em 'eliminated' 'em will make 'em any 'handsomer, then, I sez, let's 'ave 'em 'eliminated'."

Reward for Jesters Who Lighten Life's Burdens

England knights her playwrights and her men of wealth, and so does France, but France has gone a long step further and awarded academic palms to three clowns, the Fratellini brothers, for their beneficial effect on the public morale.

No task is harder than finding new jokes or making old ones appear funny, the New York World states. There is a continuing dearth of merriment, only occasionally relieved by obliging amateurs. When a good story comes to light the city pounces on it like a hawk; it is passed from mouth to mouth in every office and factory till it wears thin with handling. Obviously the market is undersupplied, and the art of eliciting smiles should be subsidized as well as honored.

The better comedians of the revere, who receive but a shame-faced fame, deserve at the least congressional recognition and pensions from the public treasury. They are in line of descent from Will Kemp, Shakespeare's clown; Grimaldi, whose memoirs were edited by Charles Dickens, and all the harlequins of history.

Since there are no orders of nobility in this country, those who succeed in being particularly exorcising should receive cash prizes or gold medals easily convertible into cash. As a nation we are too serious, not as a matter of choice, but because there is so little first rate wit to be found. And we deserve our fate. What have we ever done to encourage the successful clown except to laugh at him?

College Instructor Finds Mixer Earns More Money

Who has the greater income after college years—the scholar or the mixer? How rates the student of chemistry? One answer is given by an instructor in the University of Michigan. He has prepared a sort of alumni who's who and for how much.

The scope of his inquiry is not known, but his compilation points to the conclusion that in the ten-year period since graduation, high scholarship men have reached an average annual income of $3,000, with men prominent in extra-curriculum activities placed at an average of $10,000 a year. A word of explanation goes along with the figures. Says the instructor:

The statistics do not prove that the men of the highest grade are incapable of earning big money—they merely show these men do not prefer lines of work which are most lucrative.

So we conclude that those who wooed the lamp in college are rewarded in the measure set by their choice of career, and that those who wooed other flames have come to a more golden fortune. Scholars or mixers—young men in college all have their oil cans. Some there be who burn their oil, and some there be who merely spread it, but oil's well that ends well.—Nation's Business.

Frances Ingram To Sing Here

Prima Donna Contralto of Metropolitan and Chicago Opera Companies To Give Program Here The Week of August 2nd to 8th.

The announcement that Frances Ingram, prima donna contralto of both the Metropolitan and Chicago Opera Companies, is to sing in Kingston during the week of August 2nd to 8th, under the auspices of the (Kingston Luanis Club) Chautauqua, is heralded as one of the most interesting musical events of the season. This greatest of all American contraltos will sing here giving a mixed program to please both the musicians and music lovers.

Miss Ingram was without powerful friends and had no money, so she taught school to earn her own education as has been the case with so many of America's leading national characters. By working nights after teaching school all day she cultivated her wonderful voice. The church choir on Sunday choir rehearsal on Friday nights and the regular routine of thousands of ambitious young women was her early life.

The great chance came when she was heard by the critics of the Chicago Grand Opera Company and was given the role of "Lola" in the opera "Cavalleria Rusticana." Her success was instantaneous and so from the very start she sang leading roles. After five years with the Chicago Opera and enthusiastic audiences she went to the Metropolitan Opera in New York city.

To Put Religion In the Schools

Report to Conference Favors Week Day Schools to Teach Religion and Facilities for Religious Education in Public Schools.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Springfield, Mass., May 20.—Professor James A. James of Evanston, Illinois, a lay delegate to the Methodist General Conference, has submitted to the conference his report as chairman of the joint commission on week day religious education. The report recommends that such schools be established in every community and that the public school programs be so arranged that time will be given for religious instructions.

The report states that children quickly observe the discrepancy between the elaborate provision made for education in the public schools and the poverty of the facilities for education in religion. A system of week day religious schools is recommended for every church.

The commission on Federations of Colored Churches, through its chairman Bishop Frank M. Bristol, of Chattanooga, Tenn., has recommended to the general conference the continuance of the commission with authority to act with similar boards representing other communities. There are now 3,375,369 members in the colored Methodist Churches, including the 336,311 in the colored Methodist Episcopal Church 551,776 in the African Methodist Episcopal Church and 460,280 in the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. Establishment of a world service commission to have supervision of all the benevolent and educational work of the church was recommended to the conference today by the committee on temporal economy of which the Rev. William B. Farmer of Columbus Ind. is chairman. A membership of 65 was recommended for the commission the members to have no official connection with any of the official boards.

A minority report favoring a commission plan with a more direct form of administration was presented by Rev. Dr. George M. Fowles of New York. Resolutions favoring action by the church for extending the prohibition fight all over the world and for circulation propaganda to that end were recommended to the conference today by the committee on temperance, prohibition and public morals. The report of the committee says prohibition has been a success in this country.

The Rev. William D. Bridge, $6 of Orange, N. J. who has attended sixteen quadrennial conferences since 1885, is a visitor at the conference. He has seen 43 bishops elected during the past sixty-four years.

The Rev. George E. Heath of West Somerville, Mass., has presented to the conference a memorial favoring a time limit on terms of office of the district superintendents.

American Women Visit Cave Famed in Legend

Recently two American women in search of adventure set out from Athens on a small coasting steamer and headed for Crete. The object of their visit was to visit the cave of the minotaur, famed in the legends of ancient Greece.

Miss Charlotte Lytle, who writes about her experiences in the Minotaur, says that they found the natives in variably hospitable and always ready to give them food and assist them in any way. These two women traveled about over the island.

Their baggage was carried by mule pack. In the neighborhood of Gortina they climbed among the foot hills to a cavern dug out of the side of the hill. Here they found the lady with whom legend claims that a Greek youth named Theseus slew the minotaur, a monster, half man and half bull, who devoured every nine years seven youths and seven maidens sent as hostages from Athens.

Above is shown the stirring finish of the fifteen running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., with Black Gold, owned by Mrs. R. M. Hoofs, immensely wealthy Oklahoma oil magnate, being hard pressed to win from Chilhowee second and Beau Butler third. The judges placed Altawood fourth, ahead of Bracade. Many race goers took exception, declaring Bracade finished well ahead of Altawood. A careful study of this photograph seems to bear them out, four horses being shown bunched in the lead, ahead of Altawood, whose racing number, 7, may be seen on his blanket.

Natives Have Wonderful
System of Storing Water

There are many ways of storing water, but the natural system of the natives of Darfur (west of the Sudan) seems to be the most wonderful.

But for the tumbled tree Darfurites would perish from drought. These great trees grow in hollows, in which the rain collects during the wet season which lasts all through July and August.

The enormous trunks are hollow. As soon as the rain begins the natives gather up the water in leather bags. An expert climber goes up the tree with a rope to which is attached the precious bag. He hauls it up with care, and empties the water into the hollow trunk. The hollowness is not the result of age or disease and the surrounding wood is absolutely water-tight.

Each little group of "tukki" (huts) possesses its own trees. And on their contents the people live throughout the ten dry months.

The tumbled tree is a fruitful source of trouble. Many tribal fights are waged solely because a man from one village is believed to have been seen climbing the trees of another. The trees belonging to a village, or group of "tukki" are not public property for the dwellers in that group. The sheik and his family have the first claim on the water and their share is claimed to a decimal point. Another man may have a family claim, going back through several generations, to a certain proportion.

CAUTION—NOT PESSIMISM SHOULD BE PRESENT POLICY

By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift

In many lines of trade and industry throughout the country there is a distinct slowing up at the present time. The wheels of business are turning less rapidly. However, this situation is not one calling for a pessimistic attitude, but it does challenge our caution and conservatism, which are always safe policies. Plans for the future should be laid along careful lines, and, above everything else, there should be the elimination of all possible waste.

As a reassuring element, it should be borne in mind that the building industry, while showing unmistakable tendencies toward more restricted production in the immediate future, gives every evidence of proceeding in substantial volume. This is the key industry of the situation. No other line of business has as many ramifications, so that when building conditions are active and sound it reasonably may be assumed that general business will not be subjected to great hardship.

"Oh, was he?" replied the other; "I thought he looked rather funny at lunch."

ASPHALTING OF FAIR STREET IS UNDER WAY

Work of laying asphalt on Fair street between Henry street and Main street is progressing under the direction of the board of public works. The entire length of the street has been torn up and is being placed in condition for the laying of the pavement. The work of laying asphalt has been commenced on the block between Henry and Franklin street. On account of a strike among the colored men engaged in laying the asphalt no work was done Friday. The laying of the asphalt was resumed on Saturday after the differences had been adjusted. Several of the large trees which line the street have been removed where they interfere with the laying of the pavement.

Europe's Debt Would Pay Bonus

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, May 20.—Renewed efforts on the part of the United States government to collect some of the $11,000,000,000 owed by European nations will be made in the very near future as a result of the passage of the soldiers' bonus-insurance legislation. It was stated authoritatively today.

There is one way by which the cost of the bonus may be met and the demand for tax reduction complied without undue embarrassment or hardship to the government, it was pointed out, and that is by getting Europe's war debt on a basis that will produce something.

Treasury officials, busy with their pencils today, figured that Europe's unfunded debt to the United States will double itself in 20 years and in 1944, at the present rate and under present conditions will approximate $21,000,000,000.

In 1945 it will be called upon to make up the burden of the veterans' insurance policies involving an outlay of some $3,000,000,000. At the same time there will mature some billions in financial reckoning there must be piled up a huge surplus, and the eyes of officialdom were turned hopefully today toward Europe.

New figures obtained by the treasury today showed that Europe's total indebtedness on May 15 was $11,888,573,027 of which $10,556,086,131 is principal. Unpaid interest is piling up at the rate of $267,000,000 a year.

Only three nations have funded their indebtedness and put it on a basis of regular payments—Great Britain, Finland and Hungary. Britain's debt was $4,577,000,000. The others were relatively small. The semi-annual interest payment of $69,000,000 is expected from Britain on June 15.

The French, Italian and Belgian debts constitute the bulk of the unfunded indebtedness. France's debt originally amounted to $3,340,520,704. Because she has made no effort to fund it, interest at five per cent has swelled the total to $4,083,902,927, as of May 15. Italy's original debt was $1,647,997,050 and for the same reason now totals $2,056,270,323.

Nations that have funded pay only 2 per cent, those that have not pay 5 per cent, or rather have it tacked on their principal.

Officials are hopeful that with the adoption of the Dawes report and return of Europe to comparative stability, France, Italy and Belgium chief beneficiaries of the Dawes plan will be able to make some move toward adjustment of their American debts.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, May 20.—Supported by passage of the bonus bill over President Coolidge's veto, professional bears launched a vicious attack against values in the morning trading on the stock exchange today. Prices at the outset broke with a violence such as had not been witnessed since the middle of February when the oil scandal disturbed the market. Leading industrials, like Steel Common, Baldwin and American Can, gave away from two to four points, while still larger losses were registered in certain specialties, especially DuPont and East Iron Pipe.

No doubt, some liquidation was provoked by anti-bonus advocates but the character of trading strongly suggested that the greater part of the transactions originated with professional operators and the fall, who considered the administration's departure a golden opportunity to shake the market out of the rut and start it on a fresh decline.

It became apparent, however, that the speculative public could not be frightened into selling by opinion expressed in various quarters that the passage of the bonus bill presages unfavorable action on the tax measure.

Regardless of what might be the fate of this vital legislation, a great deal of encouragement was derived from Secretary Mellon's adherence to the plan of bringing about a 25 per cent reduction in 1923 taxes in spite of the bonus victory.

With the subsidence of the initial excitement and the failure to bring out important holdings, short covering was in order which lifted prices from one to two points above their opening levels. By the beginning of the second hour, this buying ran its course, and the market turned extremely dull.

The oils and the rails were the only groups in which losses held within reasonable bounds.

As to the former this was due to the more optimistic feeling regarding the outlook in the petroleum industry caused by yesterday's action by the Humble Oil Co. in cancelling its recent crude price reduction.

New Orleans, Texas and Mexico broke away from the reactionary tone in the rail section. The stock rose 3 points to a new high for the year in reflection of the 16 1/2 per cent extra dividend and the official announcement of the deal with the Missouri Pacific.

Call money renewed at 3 per cent. French francs displayed fresh weakness in the foreign exchange market, losing 23 points to 255, a new low on the present movement.

Following the first shock the list came back rather easily. Bears took advantage of the ensuing dullness to launch another attack in the early afternoon, pointing out at Baldwin as their main target. Tire stocks owing to the continued decline in crude rubber prices. American T. and T. broke about 2 points on the news of the offering of $150,000,000 additional stock. National Enameling was affected by rumors of new financing, dropping to a new low under 20. Fisher Body experienced a precipitate break of nearly 14 points.

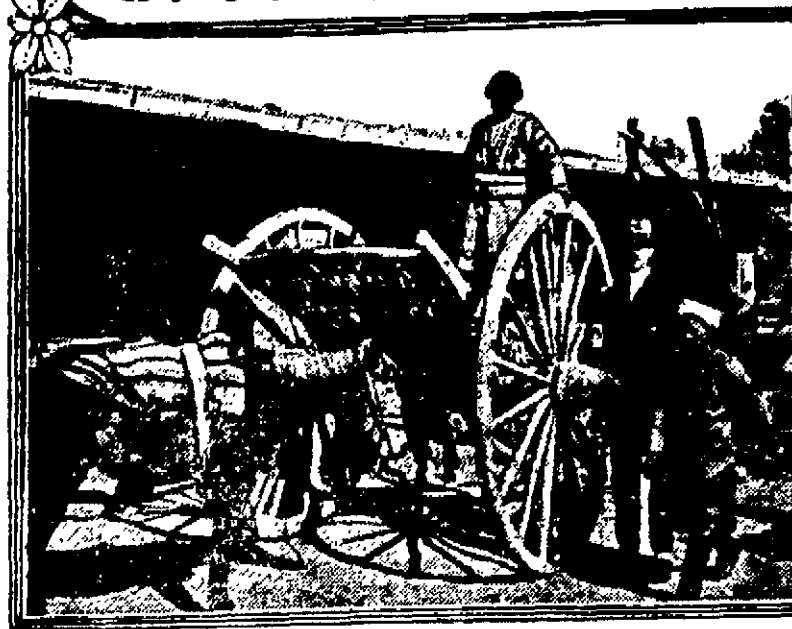

Railroad shares acquitted themselves much better. Fractional losses ruled in most issues, but Chesapeake and Ohio and Pere Marquette developed real strength and New Orleans Texas and Mexico advanced briskly on the declaration of 16 1/2 per cent extra dividend and the announcement that Missouri Pacific had gained control of the property on terms most favorably to New Orleans Texas holders.

Central Asia

Type of Cart Used in Central Asiatic Lands.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

By degrees the veil—in this case, many feet of sand—is being drawn away from the mysterious region of Central Asia whence some authorities assert came the ancestors of the peoples of all continents. As the sand is dug or blown from ruined cities and temples, history is being pushed farther and farther back and there is being disclosed evidences of the high degree of civilization and culture that existed in this mountain and desert-rift region thousands of years ago.

Perhaps the most fascinating and the most mysterious of these central Asian regions is the Lop or Tarim Basin, north of Tibet, which constitutes the heart of eastern or Chinese Turkestan. The entire central portion of the basin is desert but around its rim between it and the mountains that almost encircle it is a string of oases that have figured prominently in history. In these oases today are towns whose names at least are familiar: Yarkand, Kashgar, Khotan, and many smaller ones to the north, less known but locally important.

It is only within the last half century that the West has become passably well acquainted with the Lop basin; but medieval Europe had Munchausen-like tales of the region in the celebrated letters of Prester John, a more or less mythical character, who was represented to be a powerful Christian emperor living in central Asia. In one of the letters it is stated that: "Among other things which are very wonderful in our country is a sea of sand without water. For the sand moves and swells in waves in the manner of all seas, and is never still. This sea cannot be crossed either by boat or by any other method, and of what sort the land may be beyond it no one can know. And although water is absent entirely, nevertheless there are found on the shore on our side many kinds of fish more delicious and sweet-tasting than are ever seen anywhere else." Other wonders are related of the same region. For instance: "Into the Sandy Sea itself flows, three days of the week, a river of stones without water, impassable while its flow continues. Beyond it lies another river, whose sands are mere precious stones; or sometimes this River of Gems flows through the Sandy Sea, and is indeed the Sabbath river, flowing six days and resting the seventh, which keeps the ten tribes of the Children of Israel from crossing into the land of Prester John. And in one part of the desert where the sea lies is a people with round feet, like horses' hoofs; and in another part is the land of Femenre itself, a land where none but women dwell, and they are 'very stark and cruel'; and no man dare hide more than an hour.

Old Tales Not Far From Truth.

Strange as these stories sound, they are only slight perversions of the truth. During a recent visit to the Lop basin facts were observed which may perhaps explain all of them. For instance, when first one sees Chinese women of high class their diminutive feet are strangely suggestive of the hoofs of animals. As to the fable of the land of Femenre, there is nothing now to give rise to it directly. Marco Polo relates, however, that in his day in the region of Hami, not many hundred miles from Lop-Nor, none but women were found in the villages when caravans arrived. The men departed in order that the travelers might be more comfortable, and might be the more ready to pay for entertainment. Even today the people of Hami possess customs which seem to be a reminiscence of the ancient habit.

The Lop basin, in the very center of Asia, is a great depression, 14,000 miles long from east to west and 400 wide. Around it lies a ring of lofty plateaus from 10,000 to 20,000 feet high. At their base is a ring of piedmont gravel, almost destitute of life, and sloping gently toward like a huge beach from 5 to 40 miles wide. Then comes another ring, the zone of vegetation, where alone there are plants and an opportunity for human inhabitants other than the few nomads of the plateaus. Finally within the zone of vegetation lies a vast desert area about 1,000 miles long and 250 wide. Its western three-quarters consist of a veritable sea of sand, the Takla-Kakan desert, yellow or gray on the edges, pink in the inner portions. Row after row of almost impassable sand dunes has been piled up by the wind to heights of full 500 feet in places. The smallest dunes often move forward hundreds of feet in a year in the direction of the prevailing winds; the largest scarcely move at all. The sand is most beautiful, with its graceful sweep of wavy dunes and ripples, but the natives hate and fear it. It has proved the grave of many a native gone mad with thirst in the vain search for the gold supposed to lie hidden in sand-buried ruins.

A few rivers flow into the desert of Takla-Makan. Most of them soon wither to nothing. All are very variable, and some, such as the Yash Sher, flow in raging, impassable torrents during sunny weather in summer, but dry up when cloudy days among the mountains prevent the melting of snow. The dry beds of these "Sabbath" streams form veritable "rivers of stones." In certain cases one might almost say with the old chronicler that there are streams "whose sands are mere precious stones." When the Khotan and Kerya rivers are low, crowds of natives go out from the oases to dig in the gravel of the river bed for jade, one of the most highly prized of Chinese precious stones. Gold also is found in the upper parts of the beds of the Kerya and other rivers.

Sea of Salt is a Marsh.

East of the Sea of Sand there lies a Sea of Salt, the bed of the ancient Lake of Lop-Nor. Today the lake is merely a marsh, fed by the Tarim river, and filled with huge reeds 12 to 15 feet high. Near the mouth of the river, where alone the water is fresh enough to support life, the Lopiks have planted their villages of reeds. Formerly, according to their own account, they lived wholly on fish and birds caught in the open lanes and pools of the swamp, where the fishermen still paddle their canoes of hollowed poplar. They cannot go far to the east, for there the swamp grows more and more saline, until finally it merges into a great plain of salt, the bed of the expanded lake of former times.

The old bed of Lop-Nor is one of the most absolute deserts in the world. Even the hardy natives never venture into it. For five days a caravan of Western explorers recently stumbled wearily over a sea of rock salt broken into huge polygons 10 or 12 feet in diameter, which had buckled up around the edges to a height of from one to three feet. It was like the choppiest sort of sea frozen solid. When what appeared to be soft places were selected in which to pitch tents, the iron tent pegs, bent double. For 60 miles north and south and for nearly 200 east and west there is absolutely not a sign of any living thing.

It is relatively but a little while since Lop-Nor was much larger than now and expanded to such a size that most, if not all, of the old bed was covered by water, as is proved by the location of ancient roads and beaches. At the time of Christ, the lake appears to have been of large dimensions. Then it diminished in size, and about five centuries later was probably as small or smaller than it now is. Later it expanded, and with varying fluctuations remained comparatively large until about 1300 A. D. Now it has once more diminished, and the people who formerly were supported by it have largely died off. A century or two ago they used to carry fish two or three hundred miles eastward to the Chinese cities where Nestorian Christians lived in the days of Marco Polo and earlier. Now the desert has become so rigorous and the fish have so decreased in number that the traffic has been given up. The writer of the letters of Prester John was almost certain that the fish were produced from the Sea of Sand. They certainly came from the border between it and the Sea of Salt.

In the last few years important finds have been made among the ruins of temples and cities in the edge of the deserts of Chinese Turkestan, over which sand has drifted. Caves, too, have been found in cliffs rimming the deserts, in which are elaborately carved and decorated shrines. The evidence so far uncovered indicates that the people who lived in the country before the Christian era had Indo-European languages and so are closely connected with Europeans. The religion of these early inhabitants was Buddhism, but later they were conquered by Moslems and Mohammedanism is now dominant. The finds even seem to indicate that it may have been from this region with its ancient thriving civilization that the ancestors of the Chinese came.

To Make Electric Soldering Irons

Transformer, Lead Pencil, Wire, Wire Solder and Ice Pick Needed.

By EDWIN RUST

After borrowing my neighbor's soldering iron and blowtorch several times I decided I would not rely so much on his generosity but provide my own means of soldering connections. I procured a transformer whose output was from 14 to 25 volts, then I took a common lead pencil, some No. 18 wire, some wire solder and the handle from an ice pick and constructed the soldering iron as follows:

The lead was removed from the pencil and put in the handle, then a piece of copper wire was wound around the lead, in a close coil two inches from the end. The other end of the wire was attached to one binding post of the transformer. Likewise a piece of copper wire was wrapped around a length of solder wire and the other end of the copper wire was attached to the other side of the transformer. Apply flux to the parts to be soldered, attach the lead from the transformer to the electric light socket and turn on either 14, 18, 20 or 25 volts, and you are ready to solder.

Touch the pencil lead to the solder and allow it to heat until the solder flows. Do not touch the solder to the wire connected to the lead. A clutch pencil may be used if the wire is connected to the pencil and part of the pencil wrapped with tape for use as a handle, but the lead in such a pencil usually is small and breaks easily.—Radio Digest.

Number of Turns Per Inch in Winding Coil

If you have to wind a coil having sixty turns of No. 22 wire, double covered, but don't know how long a piece of tubing you will have to use, take a nail or a round pencil and wind on tightly an inch of wire. Measure it with a ruler and then count the turns. If you find 43 turns in that inch and you need 60 turns altogether divide 43 into 60 and you will know to the sixteenth of an inch just how much space to allow for the coil. There will be 1.4 inches or about 1 1/2 inches. Allow an eighth extra at least for safety's sake. This scheme will help you out also when you happen to have a piece of tubing in the shop and wonder how many turns of wire you can get on it. Sometimes you have to fit specified space, as often occurs when you are making a portable outfit and have a nice cabinet ready to use if you can cram the set into it. Using the same figuring as before, you can find out what size of wire will do, and of course you ought to use as large a size as possible for considerations of sharp tuning.—New York Mail.

Wrong Connection of Phones Causes Damage

One of the easiest ways to ruin a pair of phones is to leave them connected in the wrong direction on a one or two-stage audio amplifier. There is a right and a wrong way to connect phones, and if they are connected incorrectly they become demagnetized and lose their sensitivity.

The best way to tell which is the correct connection is to plug the phones in the second stage of amplification and tune in a loud signal. The phone caps should then be removed and one edge of the diaphragm should be lifted up about an eighth of an inch with the finger. When the phones are connected in one direction a very much greater pull will be noticed than when connected in the other direction. After this has been determined some kind of a mark may be placed on the phone terminal that was connected to the plate of the tube when the greater pull was noticed on the diaphragm, and the phones should always be connected with the marked terminal to the plate.

Wise to Mount Tubes in Vertical Position

If a vacuum tube is allowed to burn in a horizontal position it will cause the filament to sag, and this will change the operating characteristics of the tube, and will also shorten the life of the filament. It is, therefore, wise to mount the tube in a vertical position. Cushion supports made from sponge rubber should also be placed under the tube socket whenever possible, as this helps to absorb mechanical vibrations which cause noise in the receiver.

SLOWNESS MADE NO HIT WITH CONDUCTOR

Aristocratic Caution Rather Tried His Patience.

The late John A. Rathom, the editor of Providence, always urged young men of aristocratic birth to enter politics.

"An aristocracy," he once said in an after-dinner speech, "has the fault, certainly, of being very cautious and slow, but in politics that isn't a fault, whatever it may be elsewhere."

"Elsewhere it is a fault, yes. An aristocratic gentleman in frock coat and silk hat dashed out of a Fifth avenue club one afternoon in a rain-storm and hailed a passing bus."

"Full inside—plenty of room on top," said the conductor, and at this the gentleman halted uncertainly, with one foot on the roadway and the other on the bus step.

"Full inside, lots of room on top," repeated the conductor, rather impatiently.

Still the gentleman hesitated.

"Hurry up, sir," said the conductor. "Full inside, room on top. Can't wait here all day. Are you coming or ain't you coming?"

"Then, at last, the gentleman spoke. 'Ting it,' he said, in his aristocratic drawl, 'can't you see I'm making up my mind?'"—Detroit Free Press.

Women Who Don't Read Easy Prey of Rogues

A woman in New York who lost a roll of money that looks big to her is in no immediate danger of following the advice of the district attorney to read the newspapers. The inference from his suggestion is that if this woman had been a news reader she would not have thrown away $300 in a threadbare swindle. But as she replied that she hadn't time to read the papers, the probabilities are that by the time she has another $300 saved some other thorn-windler will drop in on her and take it away with something just as old-fashioned as the one on which she cashed in the first $300.

With daily newspaper publication of exposure of ways by which the wily feed upon the unwary, there should be little profit in any but the shrewdest and newest schemes, plans that have never been tried and which would test the best business judgment of intended victims. But there are so many who either don't have time to read the papers' exposure or believe they can rise superior to the swindlers that exposures are of little use to them. And, as the New York district attorney pointed out to this woman, the papers cost only two cents and furnish much genuine information.—Pittsburgh Leader.

All Are Georges

Senator Copeland, congratulated on a brilliant speech, said at a dinner: "Economy is the thing, but each man wants the other man to shoulder the burden. It's like the story."

"George," said the movie manager's wife, "you're always wanting me to economize, but I notice that as soon as I cut down on help and make my own dresses and all that sort of thing, you start right in smoking imported cigars and giving suppers to your stars."

"Well," said George, "what do you suppose I want you to economize for, anyhow?"—Detroit Free Press.

Dog Discovers New York Fire

Firemen Overcome by Smoke

New York, May 20.—Eighty firemen were injured, none seriously, in fighting two fires early today. One was on the Battery waterfront and destroyed one of the oldest piers in the city.

Two firemen were overcome by smoke, and two others collapsed from exhaustion in fighting this morning.

Firemen responding to the water tower fire were worn out after fighting a stubborn blaze on lower Broadway, in which seventy-six firemen were injured or overcome by smoke.

The pier was known as "the Col. Island Pier," and extended nearly 500 feet into the North River.

The blaze was discovered by a watchman's dog, owned by a watchman, who was whining and barking at the fire.

The dog's whining and barking attracted his owner's attention to the fire, and he shot out of windows, and in an alarm.

Twelve members of a fire company which arrived first miraculously escaped death. They had rushed burning structure when it burst out around them. They fought their way out, aided by their

AIRPLANE AS AID TO CUPID

By MYRA A. WINGATE

"Dr. Holt to see Miss Carlyle," said the young man as the maid opened the door.

"Sure, sir, she's gone. Went away on the train this mornin'."

The doctor winced under the blow, discovering that the healthy young personality harbored strange and unexpected emotions.

The mistress of the house could give but little additional information. One of the young ladies was going out and asked Miss Carlyle to go with her. Miss Carlyle thought it safe for a convalescent than traveling alone.

Standing on the curb, the doctor missed a time-table.

"No chance of overtaking the express. Couldn't go anyway, with a train to deliver at 2 o'clock 50 miles away. I'll take every chance, though."

He drove to the telegraph office and sent a message to be delivered on the train to Miss Carlyle.

"Will Miss Carlyle communicate with Doctor Holt? Urgent."

He jammed down savagely on the accelerator as he drove away. An unwary pedestrian cleared his radiator by one skip and turned to shout reproachfully:

"Why don't you travel by airship?" Inspiration No. 2! He swung into the stream of cars proceeding toward the county fair grounds, dodging heedlessly in and out among them.

"I say, old chap," burred the taxi, "were you ever in love?"

"Many a time," grinned the aviator. "Take it easy, boy. The second attack is milder."

"There's but one and she left on a train East," yelled Holt.

"You are crazy!" ejaculated the taxi, "and I ought to give you in charge. Why didn't you ask her before she went? How come?"

"Can you overtake that train?" asked Doctor Holt.

"You bet you!" was the succinct reply.

"Then let's go," said the doctor. "I'll pay the price."

"I have to make an exhibition flight at 2 p. m." warned the aviator.

"I'll have to speak at a meeting this week at the same hour," replied the doctor grimly.

Jumping Jehosophat! but this is going to be one bird of a trip! Map spread out before him, the aviator talked rapidly. "I know this country. Here's the express. In an hour and a half we land at this junction. You ride on the train for half an hour. I'll hop off and land at this station ahead of you. You leave the train there. With good luck we head back before 12. That will give us about three hours to come back 140 miles, carry you 50 miles further and bring me back here. Are you game?"

"All right," said the doctor. "Let's go."

The express stopped at the junction. The taxi and the chair car door flew open to admit a pale-faced young giant who swung an aviator's leather helmet in one hand. He strode down the aisle glancing from right to left until he came upon the girl he sought.

"Doctor Holt?" she exclaimed, rising in alarm. "Is anything the matter?"

"The color rushed to his face. "May I sit down, Miss Carlyle?" he asked. "I've come a hundred odd miles by airplane to see you for half an hour, and now I'm here I'm just a stuttering idiot."

"Sit here, Miss Freeman has gone to the other car. And please stutter no more," laughed the girl, "for I love to hear it."

"I'd like to stutter for you all my life. I mean I'd like to be where you could always hear me stutter. Oh, but I don't know how to propose."

"I was just about to, but you're so just follow directions."

The lady laughed outright. "This certainly smacks of mystery. "However, I will shield you. Congratulations to both."

"Some speed, boy, some speed," declared the aviator as his passenger alighted with 30 minutes to spare.

With the rapidly diminishing hum of the motor in his ears, the doctor changed collars and brushed his hair. Not one of the audience that he faced some moments later could have guessed that he had once that day been "a stuttering idiot."

Nordic Race Is Rapidly
Disappearing in Europe

A shifting of peoples has been going on in Europe for generations, and since medieval times the lower classes and races have expanded at the expense of the upper classes, so that many countries which formerly had large Nordic populations, such as Spain and Italy and the provinces of the old Austrian empire, are almost stripped of their Nordic blood. France, which all through medieval times down to within a century ago was very Nordic, has reached a point where the Nordic population has shrunk to a hopeless minority in the nation. Germany is feeling the replacement of Nordic by Alpine blood very severely, and many of her foremost thinkers regard her as almost lost to the Nordic race. The great French anthropologist, De Lapouge, stated in conversation with the writer that Germany of today is not nearly so Nordic as France was at the time of the religious wars. The case of England, still overwhelmingly Nordic, is also a serious one, because the industrial revolution there (as well as in other European countries) has led to a great expansion of the non-Nordic elements—chiefly Mediterranean—Madison Grant, in the North American Review.

Living in the Dark

Pit ponies are not the only creatures that live in coal mines, seldom seeing the light of day. Miners are often troubled with rats, mice, flies, and even frogs and toads.

The presence of mice spells danger.

They have been known to gnaw cables, causing electric wires to fuse and vapor to be exploded in gassy pits. Their food consists of scraps from the miners' meals, and they have a strange liking for oil, which they lick from the lubricated parts of machinery in the mine. Whatever their diet, however, the mice never grow very big, because the entire absence of light has a dwarfing effect.

Flies seem to thrive underground, and are a great nuisance to the miners, especially at mealtimes. Other minute forms of insect life which inhabit the mines explain why frogs and toads are frequently found there, looking fit and well-fed.

That Proves It

Mr. A—Your business college for young ladies seems to be all right.

Mr. B—It is all right.

"Do you give the girls a good practical business training?"

"In reply to that question I can only say that 60 per cent of our graduates marry their employers the first year."

Golf Seems to Have Taken Hold in Japan

Japan is perhaps one of the last places in which one would expect golf to become popular, yet within recent years the pastime has made enormous strides.

Formerly the leading players were members of the Anglo-American communities settled at Yokohama and Kobe, but Japanese golfers have now taken up the game so keenly that for some years past the holder of the championship of Japan has been a Japanese.

The prince regent, who was married recently, is one of the most enthusiastic golfers in the country. The Japanese national costume does not lend itself to golf, and nearly all Japanese golfers wear the regulation "plus fours."

In the Japanese paper Golfdom, which is printed partly in Japanese and partly in English, the following story is told (in English): "Oh, sir, anybody can teach these ladies" (meaning the students of the university); "anybody can teach these ladies Latin and Greek; but gow, ye see, sir, gowt requires a heid."

One of the most noticeable differences in the Japanese game is the lack of bad language! Japanese contains no swear words; the worst term of abuse is "baka," which means "fool."

Record Frigidity

According to the United States weather bureau "the extreme low temperature for this country occurred at Miles City, Mont., in 1888, when a record of 66 degrees below zero was attained."

Oris W. Roberts, meteorologist with the government weather bureau station at Bismarck, N. D., reports: "For the past forty to fifty years we have maintained minimum thermometers in all parts of the state, and while it is human nature to like to excel a record, the lowest temperature (official) ever recorded in North Dakota was 66 degrees below zero at Goodall, McKeen county."

One of the most noticeable differences in the Japanese game is the lack of bad language! Japanese contains no swear words; the worst term of abuse is "baka," which means "fool."

But Japanese golfers, we are told, are rapidly making up for this deficiency by learning English!

Poppy Sale Here May 29

The annual poppy drive for the benefit of the Veterans' Mountain Camp will take place throughout the state during the week beginning Sunday, May 25th, and ending May 30th. The American Legion Auxiliary of Kingston Post, No. 150, has decided to hold Thursday, May 29th, as poppy day for Kingston. The camp is now open and has during the past year, cared for 200 veterans who, because of their inability to trace their disability to their service, were unable to receive hospitalization from the Veterans' Bureau.

To continue this service to the disabled it is necessary to raise funds through the annual poppy appeal to the public. A goodly sum has been signed by the World War veterans who are receiving the state bonus which amount is placed as an endowment fund. No matter how much may be assigned the benefits cannot be realized until the interest is accumulated. Therefore, in the meantime, care must be given the less fortunate comrades by the money realized from the sale of poppies. The people of this state have in the past been very generous to the disabled. They, therefore, look to the legion to use their usual good judgment in the disposal of these funds. It is expected that the poppies will be sold to the public at not less than 10 cents each, but many people knowing the purpose for which the funds are used will gladly pay more. Attached to each poppy will be a tag bearing the name "Veterans' Mountain Camp," American Legion, copyrighted.

Mrs. William A. McBride, with a corps of earnest workers, will be stationed throughout the city.

LEIBHARDT HEIGHTS.

Leibhardt Heights, May 19.—Mrs. Raymond A. Cole of Amsterdam has returned to her home after a few days' visit with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Quick spent Friday in Kingston.

Miss Sylvia Quick of Amsterdam is spending a few weeks at her cottage here and disposing of her household furniture.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Lounsbury of Mombasac were callers here on friends on Thursday.

Mrs. Phoebe Krom and grandson will occupy the cottage of Miss S. Quick after June 1.

ELLENVILLE

Ellenville, May 20.—Maratanza Council, Degree of Pochanontas, will observe what is known as "draping of the charter" at its temple on the afternoon of Sunday, May 25. This service is held in memory of the deceased members of the council and will be in the form of a memorial service consisting of singing, addresses and draping of the charter by a degree staff.

Wednesday and Thursday, August 6 and 7, are the dates for the "trading post" of Maratanza Council, to be held at Norbury Hall. It is not the intention of the council to appeal to the public for donations, but if anyone desires to contribute and article that goes toward making a "trading post" (fair) it will be greatly appreciated.

Several have expressed a desire to go to Warwick on Saturday, May 31, at which time the Hudson River Red Men's Council will be held. The Red Men announce that as it is necessary to make arrangements for transportation and insure a place at the banquet for those desiring to attend the Hudson Valley Red Men's Council at Warwick on Saturday, May 31, it is requested that notice be given immediately by members of their intention to make the trip.

The Hudson Valley Red Men's Council will be the guest of the Tuxedo Tribe of Warwick, Saturday, May 31. The council fire to be kindled at 2:30 p. m. by Chief Minnerva William A. Heath of the Napanoch. At 6 o'clock a banquet will be served by Mistucky Council, D. of P., after which a street parade headed by Franklin Band of 22 pieces of Walden will take place. Gt. Sr. Sagamore Peter P. Prunty will deliver the "long talk," and an outdoor adoption will be conferred on a class of pale faces by the degree team of Chactohocic Tribe, No. 95, of New York city. In case of rain, the degree will take place in Masonic Hall, where the afternoon session will be held. It is expected that a large delegation from Ellenville will be present. Those desiring to take the trip will please notify Garry Brown, of the local tribe.

Mrs. W. L. Douglas and daughter, Barbara, are visiting in New York.

Mrs. George Loeffler and son, George, of Brooklyn motored to Mrs. Wilbur Knickerbocker's at Ulster Heights last Tuesday, where they are spending some time.

Employees of the local post office took their annual case examinations this week, under the watchful eye of I. J. Campbell, federal inspector.

All of the local men passed the examination better than 95 per cent and Postmaster William L. Fuller is justly proud of his force.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Post spent last week at Sundown Lodge, where Mr. Post celebrated his birthday on May 16, as he has done on the same date for many years past.

Mr. Post has fished the Sundown stream yearly for over half a century, a record that it would be difficult to equal.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Geisler and son, Harry, returned home last week from Florida. The trip was made by auto via Asheville, North Carolina and Washington, D. C. The party just missed the tornado and storm which recently did so much damage in the south. Stops were made at Asheville, Macon, Greenville and Washington. The party remained at the national capital long enough to visit the more important government buildings and went, also to Mt. Vernon.

A movement is on foot to purchase one of the Miller traffic directing lights that were demonstrated at the corner of Main and Canal streets last week. Mr. and Mrs. Strauss, of the United Cigar Store, have received subscriptions of $125 and if the village will add the price of the present light to this sum, removing the latter to another point, the project will doubtless go through.

Wawarsing Chapter, R. A. M., will attend the district convention at Caskill on Thursday, May 22. Plans have been made so that all who wish to go may do so. Van Kleeck's big bus has been engaged for the occasion and the party will leave from the Marshall-Jansen Garage at 10:15 a. m.

Dr. Walter M. Thayer, Jr., who addressed the local Masonic lodge Monday evening, will broadcast an address from Station WOR, Newark, Wednesday evening, May 21. WOR works on a wave length of 495 meters and comes in strong in this vicinity.

Clarence Kyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rouben Kyle of this village, is suffering with pneumonia.

James Lundrigan of Napanoch left some time ago for Mohonk Lake, where he has been employed for a number of seasons.

Mrs. George F. Harker and daughter, Lita, are spending some time in Troy, N. Y., visiting with Mr. and Mrs. George Harker, Jr., there.

Mrs. James Brown, who underwent an operation at the Benedictine Hospital in Kingston (is recovering nicely).

Richard Campbell is spending some time in Ellenville.

William Decker has returned from California, where he spent the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Holmes of Middletown, N. Y., spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis.

Bishop Lloyd's Talk at St. John's

In his sermon at St. John's Episcopal Church on Sunday, where he administered the rite of confirmation to a class of seventeen, Bishop Lloyd warned those who are older that if they fully appreciated what the young people just confirmed had done, they would stand by them and warn them where they would come upon slippery places; where the intricacies of life are through which God alone can help by the gift of His Holy Spirit. They would lead them to the sacraments, without which the divine spirit in humanity dies out. The bishop did not claim to know why, but did know that God's words were true. "Unless you abide in Me and I in you," nothing can be accomplished.

While all who listened to his voice might soon forget even the message if they chose, the preacher said he did hope they would sometime think of the stranger who brought to them a word that Christ himself had spoken. If God's spirit means anything to human beings, the gift of the Holy Ghost must have some practical value. If God had said He would give his children wealth, or fame, or position, how quickly all would have taken note thereof. But He did not waste His time over such matters. He even said "Who am I that you should make Me ruler over your things?" and bade them go to their people about such matters. To Christ this gift of the Holy Ghost was of so great value that He even told His disciples that it would not be good for them to have the help and inspiration of His presence always for if they did they would not then receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

The bishop thought that probably every adult person before him had been confirmed, but he wondered to how many the gift of the Holy Ghost, the spirit of God, had really anything to do with the way in which they conducted their business; the way in which they lived with their neighbors or acted toward their children; the sort of atmosphere they created in their homes. Bishop Lloyd admitted that most of us do forget there is a Holy Spirit, but how can we, when Christ had given us the promise before He died for His convictions—and Bishop Lloyd warned his hearers that Jesus Christ was not murdered; He laid down His life for us. What Christ said was true and He had promised to give His supreme power to human nature.

Bishop Lloyd said we all have to have a theory in order to do our thinking and a definition in order to act, and he would give his hearers his theory to think about. Though he admitted that he had not yet learned to always make it work, he knew it did and would work and that it was right.

We need not be stupid or dull or lacking in imagination if we accept God's promised gift of the Holy Spirit and go after the eternal which is so vastly more inspiring, so much greater an adventure than stagnating in the Slough of Despond. No man can be really a man, and human without being inspired by God, but if we will let God come into our lives, the dreariest drudge may be working with Almighty God to set the world free. The preacher told his congregation that of course they would have to do as they pleased, they could accept the challenge or not. In any event God would not stop them, but He might say to them, "This is what you might do in the power of my spirit, you and your friends and your families and children, if you will only and always make use of the gift which I give you with the laying on of hands."

The game was very closely played and was decidedly interesting. Swart on the mound for the losers, allowed but four hits and Van Aken for the winners, but 2.

The teams in the Twilight League have many supporters, who come out to the games and exercise their lungs. If more of the backers of their favorite team come out to the contests, the players are encouraged and put up better games.

K. H. S. FACULTY NINE DEFEATED ROOM 15

Friday afternoon a hard struggle was witnessed at the Athletic Field, between the faculty of the high school and roll call room 15. Room 15 played well but the faculty had more experience.

"Wally Schang" alias Mr. Woodward, caught the curves and spit-balls of Coach Perry of the H. S. varsity. "Long George Kelly" alias Professor Chum held down the first sack, while Mr. Culver did fine work on second. Mr. Williams, who played shortstop, demonstrated how that position should be played. The hot corner was ably handled by Mr. Dunn, ex-player of the "St. Louis Cardinals." Mr. Cocks, playing field, showed his ability to hit and steal bases.

For Room 15 Goldberg and Spiegel formed the battery. The final score was 15 to 6.

The Port Jervis team is the dark horse of the league. The locals have heard nothing of their prowess. The locals will line up as follows: Capt. Whiston, catcher; Vogt, 1b.; Hauser, 2b.; Hoffman, ss.; Messinger, 3b.; McLane, cf.; Howard, rf.; Schmidt or Ummelice, rf.
